DROWNED IN THE BAY.

The Treacherous Ice Claims
Another Victim. Mr.
August Nelson.

Mr. August Nelson broke through the thin ice near Lang's Point last night and was drowned. The unfortunate man, who is a Swede, 38 years of age, was last seen at Henry Lee's, Main street, about 11 o'clock last night, when he left for home. Early this morning his friends became anxious as deceased had never reached his home, and on investigation being made, his tracks were discovered on the ice, which being followed led direct to Lang's Point where there is a strong current. An alarm was at once raised and a number of citizens began a search for the body. There was a large hole broken through the ice, and necessitated him to break through again, this time to go to his death. The grappling irons were obtained and the cold work of dragging for the body was undertaken by Mr.
Henry Lee and a small party of plucky Swedes, whose movements on the yielding and crackling ice were watched with great anxiety by a crowd on shore. A small boat being run out Mr. Lee got in and broke the ice for some distance, finally bringing the body to the surface at about 11 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Nelson is an old time Rat Port-ager, having worked for many years for the Ross, Hall & Brown firm, and afterward for the Rat Portage Lumber Company. He was unmarried and had no relatives in this country. He was a thrifty and industrious citizen, being possessed of some property, and a considerable sum of money in the bank. He was only thirty-four years of age, and his death is a great loss to the community. He had been in the country for some time, and was well known to all who were acquainted with him.

Dr. Spencer's Lecture.

Old London was never more minutely or gracefully described to a Rat Portage audience than in the address by Dr. Spencer in the Baptist church Thursday evening last. He did not talk to any length on the old worn-out subjects of St. Paul's Westminster Abbey, etc., but entered into the life of the city and gave much information about the government of the metropolis, its numerous navies and the Lord Mayor. The lecture was very interesting and one of the best heard here.

Mrs. Gurne, Mrs. Sigurdson and Mr. Carpenter entertained the audience prior to the lecture in their usual splendid manner. Miss Wellman was the accompanist.

Portage, and will be here for next Sabbath. The new pastor is a man of experience, sociability, cordial ity. His western experience will be of great service here, and as a preacher he is considered much to be desired. Mr. Reddick is a married man, and comes to settle in what he believes to be a town with a future. He has been elected by a board of thirty, prominent Baptist pastors and business men
in response to the church's request.
Dr. Spencer has succeeded in preparpastor, and the church is in a position to receive him.

ST. ANDREW'S BANQUET.

The Merry, Witty and Eloquent Scots Honor Their Patron Saint.

Last Friday evening, observed throughout the civilized world as the day of St. Andrew's Day, was fittingly celebrated by local sons of Scotland,
who assembled in the big dining room of the Hilliard House, and held a national feast and fête. Greeting telegrams were received from St. Andrew's Societies in Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa and Winnipeg, and our own Society sent out a message which we can say, without egotism, was one of the finest pieces of poetic sentiment
published that day in the Dominion.
Our greeting was:
"Aches to the King, to the Empire and to the world."
An' twa, twa and Scotland, our ain
country mither:
To the land where we live and where we'll be till we die
We'll just tak' sufficient to wa' tither

That's our text! What's yours?
The cities above named sent texts as

THE HEAVY TAXPAYER.

When Artaxerxes, surbanted Longimanus, signed in Persia, there was a certain man who lived in the ninth satrapy in a town called Hamadan, his name was Bradonius, and he owned some dwelling houses the which he rented to the artisans of the place, who regularly paid the rental moneys at New Year. As the years passed he built more dwellings that he might rent them to the industrious artisans, and in order to do so borrowed large sums of money from the Jews, paying an usurious interest thereon.

He became wealthy, but strange to say as his wealth increased, he gradually lost his peace of mind, and he was wont to lament bitterly, and bemoan his fate, crying in the streets "pity me for I am sore oppressed, I have to pay enormous taxes to the Satrap, and now behold he is building great caravan routes throughout the province, and I will have to pay heavier taxes than ever."

And then Bradonius would mount the rostrum and speak to the artisans saying: "The Satrap is pursuing a policy of provincial profligacy, and black ruin stalks us in the face. Let us petition the king to remove this reckless man, that I, Bradonius may be made Satrap to rule in his place, for behold I have your interest at heart—I pay heavy taxes and I should have the say as to how my money should be spent."

And the Satrap hearing these things from his trusty courtiers, dispatched his secretary, one Uliz, to Hamadan, to confer with Bradonius, and to show him the error of his ways, but he would not listen to the wise counsels of Uliz, who said he would then be forced to speak to the artisans. But Bradonius having spoken to them thought that they would prove loyal to his cause, and therefore he defied Uliz and told him to take the rostrum if he pleased, as such a course could not advance the cause of the Satrap.

And Uliz spoke to the artisans: "Fellow countrymen and loyal subjects of Iran, I, Uliz, the representative of the Satrap, crave your attention for some moments, for I have something to say to you which concerns you vitally."

"Your estimable fellow citizen, Bradonius, one of your wealthiest taxpayers, protests against the prosecution of work on the caravan roads. As a heavy taxpayer he has a right to protest against what he considers is extravagance and I am pleased to ob-murder is upon your heads. For man, he had neither kith nor kin, and his houses and lands are now the property of the state. I go now to stop the work on the roads, but before I take my leave I here proclaim that every artisan who has lived in one of the heaviest taxpayers' houses for five years doth now own the house; it is present to him from the state. Ah, yes, you speak of the roads, and you would have the work stopped. Certainly it shall be as you wish, and when I return to the Satrap I will tell him you are loyal subjects of Iran and that you never complain against the payment of taxes."

There has been a general election in Colombia Central America and the Liberals have been defeated. The government is sustained, and both parties are now cleaning their muzzles, loading, so that they will be ready for the next general election which may not take place until next year.

The indications for a big ice crop this year are bright, but the greatest anxiety exists in regard to snow. It is now December and wheeled rigs are still in use. It will be too bad if we have to wait until January 6th for the first large fall of snow.

The man with the hoe, Mr. Markham, has been writing more poetry. This time he starts off with—

"I thank Thee Father for this sky
Wherein the little sparrows fly
Does Edwin expect thesky wasmade for sparrows to walk in?"

The entomologist who made the statement that a mosquito only lives 24 hours is a prevaricator. Mrs. G. P. Phillips caught a mosquito in her dining room last week and sent it to the Miner, and the rascally pest is living yet in a small bottle, and we honestly believe that if we allowed him his freedom, he would be ungrateful enough to bite someone.

The Hudson's Bay Company in Winnipeg, have a five-page advertisement in one of the Saturday dailies, which strikes us as being the greatest piece of commercial advertising ever done in Canada. We do not judge it by its size so much as by the exceedingly clever way in which it is written. The reader can sit at home and literally turn the huge H. B. stores inside out and examine almost every article and find out its price in half an hour.

Saturday's Free Press contains a vigorous editorial on the duty of the Manitoba government as regards the prohibition act. There is some talk of the government adopting the referendum principle, and going back to the people again to ask them whether they really meant it when they asked for prohibition. The Free Press says the government's plain duty is to enforce that new liquor law, and is so emphatic about it that the reader finishes the article with the impression in his mind that the Free Press thinks the law cannot be enforced.

TRICK PHOTOGRAPHY

SOME LIES THAT ARE TOLD BY THE TRUTHFUL CAMERA.

Simple Mechanism or Juggling With Perspective Brings Odd Results. The Man in the Bottle—Making a Fat Woman Thin.

The notion that the camera cannot lie has become one of the few fixed notions of popular belief; but while this opinion is true in the strictest interpretation of the phrase, yet the man behind the lens or he who has charge of the developing process can so manipulate the unsuspecting instrument or the equally unsuspecting subject that what a camera shows, with the scope of perspective is now a never recognized own ingenuity.

Of late years trick photography and fake photographs have become distinct features of the photographer's art, and effects are easily produced which belie the subjects as which the camera is aimed. But the question naturally arises, How can this be done when the camera has to record the impression of things as they are? It is by juggling with the perspective or by simple mechanism only that these apparent phenomena in the photographic line are produced.

In the first place it is necessary to understand that there is a difference between a trick photograph and a so-called "fake" photograph. The term "fake" photography is applied to the transposition of subjects from the original background to a new one in which the person or group taken may never have been. It is "trick" photography which is the more interesting, as it calls for a certain amount of cleverness and ingenuity on the part of the operator.

One of the best examples of this sort of picture taking is the photographing of a person in a bottle. Now of course no studio is possessed of a glass bottle large enough to hold a human being, and the dullest beholder must suspect a trick. The explanation, however, of the manner in which it is done is surprisingly simple. In this instance a single plate is used. The subject to be taken in the bottle is first placed in front of a black background and taken with a carefully timed exposure of just enough duration to bring out the object distinctly. Then the empty bottle is placed against a dark background, and, after carefully adjusting the focus, a short exposure is first taken may be well within the lines of the neck, bottom and sides of the bottle, a picture of this bottle is taken on the same plate at just twice the exposure of the first object photographed. When the plate is developed, the bottle naturally comes up first, with the first impression nearly inside, as it appears.

Some few years ago photographers were puzzled and members of the theatrical profession amused at the exhibition of a series of pictures of a female actress who had made propositions as a model to entertain large numbers of men in the pictures they were sympathetic forms, although the figures were unmistakable.

At first it was claimed that the figures were caused by the reflections in the mirrors, but in reality the advantage of having a perspective was developed.

A certain corporation for her picture in a recent publication. The subject was placed her at a distance of 10 feet from the camera. The result was a picture of a woman in a bottle.

One took a screen of the camera and placed a glass bottle in front of it. The subject was placed in the bottle. The result was a picture of a woman in a bottle.

"I wrote Dr. Pierce regarding my case, and received a prompt reply, free."

"I endured nearly four years of suffering," writes Mrs. L. Myers, of Washington, W. Va., "caused principally from improper medical attention after the birth of a child, and female weakness, resulting in a complication of diseases. Had a terrible cough and an incessant pain and soreness in lungs. Was reduced in flesh from 184 pounds to about 130 pounds in eighteen months. I had no appetite, and became so weak and nervous I could scarcely sit up. I doctored with our home physicians for two years with no benefit, I was finally induced to try Dr. Pierce's medicines."

I wrote to Doctor Pierce regarding my case, and received a prompt reply, free, advising the proper medicines for my case. After taking four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and four of his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' three doses each day, also taking one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed and some of his 'Pellets,' I ceased coughing, and am now enjoying splendid health and have gained thirty-five pounds in weight. I again feel like my former self, thanks to Dr. Pierce and his great medicines."

Such women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce's 'The Female.' All correspondence is confidential and all women are treated by direct professional attention. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Little Rock, Ark.

FROM THE PRAIRIE CITY

Interesting Items of News
From our Winnipeg Correspondent.

"The Casino Girl" was the attraction at the Winnipeg theatre last week Friday and Saturday saw large audiences assemble to enjoy the much talked of musical and theatrical treat. The stage costumes were elegant and the dancing was perfect and in many respects wonderful. The singing was perhaps the weakest feature. Mr. Frank Bernard as "Pisner Pasha," Mr. Harry Short as "Gazet," and Miss Clara Palmer as "The Casino Girl" were decidedly successful.

Among the many theatrical attractions for December are "The Bargainmaster," "Peg Woffington," "Shore Acres," Morrison's "Faust," and the Royal Italian Band.

An organization of the musicians and dramatists of the city has been effected by some of the enthusiasts of music and drama. This organization is known as the Western Canada Music and Amusement Bureau, and its object is to systematize engagements for concerts, etc., in Winnipeg, the province, and the northwest territories. Among those who occupy a prominent position in this bureau is Mr. Phillip McRitchie, who is recognized throughout the city as one of its most talented musicians. Town Topics of last week has a very neat cut of Mr. McRitchie on one of its prominent pages.

A double hockey series has been arranged for between the college of the city. There will be junior as well as senior games. Much disappointment is felt in Manitoba college that Matt Brown will not be playing for "Toba" this year. It is said that he played last year one of the finest games of cover ever played in the city.

NOT HIS FAULT.

A Man Who Became an Involuntary Train Robber.

"How I became a train robber on a midnight train between New York and Washington is one of the most thrilling experiences I have had recently," said a valuable member of Uncle Sam's staff of secret service men to a reporter yesterday.

"I crawled into my berth in Jersey City about 12 o'clock on a hot night, and after I had squirmed out of my clothes and was ready to cramp myself up for a sleep I became aware that I needed a drink of water very much. I, however, made no attempt to call the obliging porter and dozed off, still thinking of the drink of water which I did not have. You can imagine the sensation which went through me when, as the train was whizzing along, I was brought back to wakefulness by the realization that some one had spoken to me. It was a woman's voice, and her words, although spoken in a low tone, seemed to have made a deep impression on my brain. She had said: 'Here, darling, drink this.'

"At the same time something cool touched my hand, and I could not have been guilty of any crime for the moment. I pressed me was that here was my drink. I did not seem to realize where I was or to comprehend who was offering me the water. I simply raised up on my elbow and grasped the proffered draft. As I did so a delicate little hand released hold of a silver mug with a gold lining, and spilled the water and the wine that had accompanied me to drink uttered a startled exclamation. I heard the rattle of the curtains of some nearby berth, and then all was quiet.

"What was there for me to do? Nothing. I immediately saw that a mistake had been made, and I again resumed my slumber, with the mug as a bedfellow. It was a silver mug with a gold lining and had an artistic monogram engraved on its outer surface. The next morning I looked around me, after the car had been made once more into a day apartment. In the seat adjoining mine there sat a very comely woman of youthful appearance, with a small, curly-headed boy. I felt sure she was the owner of the mug, but how to get it to her I did not know. While I was deliberating the train stopped and the woman arose to leave the car. I hastened to my feet, fished out the mug, and started after her. After this time I lay flat and begging her pardon said my most unconcealed manner, 'I believe you are leaving your drinking cup.'

"The woman looked very stern and nearly took me off my feet replying most positively: 'You must be taken. The cup does not belong to me.'

"After she left the car, I hastened to the baggage car, and found the mug in a box. I took it out and found it had been tampered with. I gradually came to the conclusion that I had been the victim of a trick.

The actors' postoffice was established many years ago in a corner of the office of The Dramatic Mirror, a newspaper devoted to the affairs of staidland. It has never been a very large office, but its business and importance to its clients have both increased to such an extent that it is now a recognized and necessary institution. It is also one of the busiest little offices in the United States, for nowadays no actor or actress troubles to give a private address. It is taken for granted that all correspondents know that the easiest and quickest method of sending a letter to a theatrical person is to send it to The Mirror office.

In this way the little office has become the clearing house for all theatrical correspondence. Most traveling theatrical companies furnish a printed route list, with the name of each town and the date at which each theater will be visiting during the season, accompanied in each instance by the date. Thus the actor's friends know where and when to write to him at all times during the season. It happens sometimes that an acquaintance is not sure of the route, and this is where the little postoffice comes in. The letter is in care of The Mirror, which publishes each week a list of all letters received. These are held until called for or sent for. An actor who is playing in San Francisco, for example, will glance through the letter list and, finding his name there, will send a stamp to the postmistress, who will forward his letter any place on his route, according to instructions.

If a theatrical manager wishes to communicate with an actor whose address he does not know, he sends the letter through The Mirror, feeling sure that it will reach him through that medium. Thus the little postoffice is kept busy, while many amusing incidents occur just outside her iron grating. She might tell some and stories, too, if she were so minded, of letters that never came and humorous anecdotes of the pompous demeanor of some players who come to inquire for letters with as tragic a mien as though they were awaiting a scene from "Hamlet." Pathetic is the daily record of the actor who, in answer to an inquiry, has written to tell some manager "the lowest salary for which I shall play the part" and who hopes to be signed and returned. Each day he peers inquiringly through the grating, at first with only self assurance, then with a doubtful air, and finally, at last the poor fellow is forced to "consider silence a polite negative," and he retires crestfallen and disappointed.

Speaking of Luck.

The most destructive mode of capturing the muskrat is by spearing. Four or five rods of iron three or four feet long are secured in a cross section frame of wood or iron, and their points are sharpened, and with this the hunter approaches the rat, and as he comes within range, he strikes him with the point of the rod, and the rat is killed. The hunter then picks up the rod, and the rat is thrown into the water. The rat is then picked up by the hunter, and the rat is then thrown into the water. The rat is then picked up by the hunter, and the rat is then thrown into the water.

The Trouble With the Cake.

When a cake remains too much longer on the table, it will sink from its edges or rise up sharply with a crack in the middle. If a cake has a coarse grain, it was not beaten enough or the oven was too slow.

Some men owe all they have in this world to others and some owe a lot more than they have.

then a young doctor in a big practice, was seized with the idea of writing a history of the intellectual development of humanity. Amid all the confusion and apparent chaos and anarchy—amid all the changes of time and climate and race: from the religion of the Greeks and the Roman to that of the Hindus, the Buddhist and the Christian—he thought he could see one great connecting and intelligent plan and clue, and to trace all that out became the great ideal and object of his life.

"I have met many learned men in my time, but I never met one who struck me as having grasped so wide a sphere of human knowledge. A critic of The Daily News said very justly that to know Dr. Crozier's books was to know several libraries. And it is just that feeling I always have; when I take up one of the volumes in which he has set forth his philosophy. I was able to form some judgment from old classic reading of his chapters on the philosophies of Greece and Rome; but I am told that his chapters on Buddhism and the other religions of the east have been found quite as correct and inspiring by men who have devoted their whole lives to that one subject. One can understand the huge, patient, gigantic industry which this must have meant, and the wonderful power of assimilation and understanding. The volume before me deals with politics, and deals with them in the true philosophic spirit. It brings to bear on the problems of to-day the lessons of history, and judges the problem of the hour, not merely by the passion or even the need of the hour, but by the great lessons of history. I am glad to hear that the book is selling largely. Longmans are the publishers of this, as of all the preceding volumes of Dr. Crozier."

Close Call in a Big Shop.

It used to make me mad to find the backs of the new-bought periodicals as disfigured by the aniline stamp of the newsdealer, writer, or Vernon of Vancouver, B.C., to the press. What right, I used to think, have these fellows to print their advertisements on things I pay for? Now I think and feel differently about the matter. It came about through a visit I paid to another city last week. As I passed through the depot I bought a magazine at the newsstand, and later on, when I was up town, I had occasion to step into a large departmental store.

As usual in such stores, they had a book counter, and while looking at the volume that caught my eye, I laid my magazine carelessly on top of a pile of periodicals. When I was walking away, I again stepped up hastily and said: "Excuse me, sir, but you have forgotten to pay for that magazine."

"Why," I replied, greatly startled, "I didn't get it here. I had it with me and have been holding it in my hand all the time."

As I was saying this, I realized that that wasn't strictly true, and the girl clerk, who had rushed around the corner, contradicted me at once.

"It isn't so," she said breathlessly. "He wasn't holding it in his hand. I saw him pick it up—myself—right off the top of the pile."

I withdrew that myself, said the floor walker, "You have probably forgotten," he said.

The matter was becoming serious to me, yet I did not know what to say. A thousand and one things rushed into my mind. Of course, I

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR WEAK NERVOUS WOMEN.

It's only natural that when a woman finds a remedy which cures her of nervousness and weakness, relieves her pains and aches, puts color in her cheek and vitality in her whole system, she should be anxious to let her suffering sisters know of it.

Mrs. Hannah Holmes, St. James Street, St. John, N.B., relates her experience with this remedy as follows:—"For some years I have been troubled with fluttering of the heart and dizziness, accompanied by a smothering feeling which prevented me from resting. My appetite was poor and I was much run down and debilitated.

"Since I started using Millburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, the smothering feeling has gone, my heart beat is now regular, the fluttering has disappeared, and I have been wonderfully built up through the tonic effect of the pills. I bow feel stronger and better than for many years, and cannot say too much in praise of the remedy which restored my long lost health."
